A group of powerful and influential executives meet at billionaire Warren Buffett's Waddesdon Manor. Among them—James Wolfensohn (President, World Bank), Jorma Ollila (CEO, Nokia), the CEO of the worlds largest food processing and distribution company, Chairman and CEO of the worlds largest research-based pharmaceutical company, CEOs of major oil corporations, Chairman and CEOs of major banking establishments, Arnold Schwarzenegger (California Governor), celebrity customer of the conference sponsor NetJets Inc, a private jet business owned by Buffett, De Beers chairman Nicky Oppenheimer and three unnamed guests. Of the three unnamed, they nominate one, George W. Bush (Dubya) to the U.S. Presidency. He agrees as long as he make his legacy by waging war against those countries that deny freedom and democracy; countries where he can spread the word of God (unless they are 'owned' by his "moneyed buds"). All supplicatingly agree. During a private prayer session, he is visited by Carl Sagan, Shakespeare, Lincoln, Harry Truman, Confuscus, John F. Kennedy, Di Vinci, Mahatma Ghandi, Lord Timothy Dexter, Susan B. Anthony, Eleanor Roosevelt, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Anne Frank, Barbara Jordan, Golda Mier, and of course, God—all summoned by God to fix Dubya's leadership image. A good politician must have a good image to sell his agenda and to buy his legacy for the world to remember. Minimum 12 Actors
