

Tar Tiff focuses on religious hypocrisy in collusion with greed, war-mongering, contempt of human rights, racism and sexism in contemporary America. The transgressors: Tar Tiff, a manipulative televangelist; Felicity, creator of a global corporation who, with Tar Tiff's help, has her son Orson run for office to further her interests; and at first, Orson. The intended victims: Elmira, Orson's wife of one year; Marianne, Orson's feminist daughter from a previous marriage; Damien, Orson's homosexual, union activist son; Valerio, Marianne's Mexican-American boyfriend and a lawyer for immigrants' rights; Valerio's parents, gardeners to Orson and Elmira; Elmira's friend Doreen, who runs a women's clinic and shelter; and Damien's partner, Paul. Resistance to Tar Tiff and Felicity, including Orson's liberation from them, leads to a happy ending.
